MOKENA ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TO CONTINUE GETTING STATE AID

It has been called to our attention that the statement appearing in the August 18th issue about state aid for the elementary school was somewhat misleading. During the 1943-44 school year District 159 received for the grade school from state aid fund the sum of $3,136.26. It was divided as follows: Regular state aid $1504.49 special aid $1631.77. According to the County Supt. of Schools, the state aid will be forthcoming even though there is no longer a two year high school as this state aid applies to grade schools only.

REGISTRATION FOR FALL TERM J. T. H. S. NOW IN FULL SWING

Registration for the fall term at the Joliet Township high school is in full swing with hundreds of students from rural districts throut Will County enrolling in the many courses offered by the institution.

Roosevelt Basler, superintendent of the school, expressed gratitude at the opportunity the Joliet secondary school has had thru the years to serve the young people of the rural areas, and pointed out many advantages the school has to offer.

"A well trained faculty of 140 experts", he said, make up the teaching staff of our nationally famous school—all of them leaders in their fields.

"The variety of courses and opportunities are second to none in the country. The chance for courses and related activities is unlimited. "We have a four year agriculture course under the direction of Elmer Rowley, which has been termed "definitely superior" by state authorities. Correlated to this are many other courses that should prove attractive to rural young people. In our shops we have much to offer, electric welding, machine shop, farm carpentry auto and tractor mechanics, and a score of other activities of interest to farm boys.

For the farm girl, we have a home economics department that is the best.

In addition, and more important, we are especially equipped to give every young person a broad and thoro general education which is the foundation of good citizenship. Also, our credentials are the highest in the accrediting systems of college and universities.

Rural students have always played a big part in our school", Mr. Basler concluded. Many fine musicians from the rural areas have been members of our superior musical organizations; many of our star athletes have been farm boys, many of our highest scholastic records are held by rural young people.

Registration may be completed any day between the hours of 9 and 4 o'clock with the exception of Saturday and Sunday. All are urged to register by Sept. 1. After that date a late registration fee of one dollar is charged.

School opens for beginning freshmen on Tuesday, Sept. 5. All other students are to report Wednesday, Sept. 6.

Draught Greatly Reduce Farm Crops

The present draught will greatly decrease most farm crops, states Farm Adviser C. A. Hughes. Even though we have rains, much damage has been done. With dwindling food surpluses we will find ourselves with a meager supply if we are to feed an army and others.

Ten years ago we saw the beginning of dry weather and it may be we are in for a few drought years in these run in ten year periods.

Farmers incomes will be very seriously curtailed with less production under ceilings and higher labor costs.

Parents Receive News From Sons Past Week

Kurt Hellmuth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hellmuth of Mokena, who was injured in action in the French invasion, has written the following letter to his parents telling of his being wounded:

Somewhere in England
Aug. 14, 1944

Dear Folks:

I certainly have been doing a lot of bouncing around lately. Hope you received the only letter I had a chance to write in France. We saw plenty of action there, most of which I will never forget. After being lucky for many days, a piece of shell finally hit me in the leg, the right thigh. They take good care of you so I'm right back where I started from for a little while any way. Guess I'll be sent back to the outfit as soon as it heals up.

I wish I could tell you about some of the things of the boys pictures I sent home. What I mean is the fellows themselves. They say you can't mention things that happened to others so will have to let it go for a while.

At times I had a lot of fun with the Krautts because I could talk their language. You should have seen the expression on their faces.

One day I was driving the jeep down the road and ran into Fred Clark. He's still OK driving a truck around. I also saw some of the boys in Bob's outfit and they say he's all right. Both of these guys are usually miles behind our front lines so its fairly safe for them.

We receive our mail OK. Usually have to read it in a fox hole. One morning I received two pounds of candy from Frankie so we passed it from one fox hole to another and ate it before taking after the Jerries.

I'm feeling fairly good and in pretty good shape. You get better service than money can buy. I'm writing in bed, the first time we had sheets and a decent bed since we left the States.

Kurt
Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson also of Mokena have received word that their son was wounded in France on July 26th.

U. S.-BRITISH OIL ACCORD

This column, it should be noted in advance, is likely to be dull. But if you are interested in keeping your son or husband out of another war, it should be important.

The United States and Great Britain are just concluding the first agreement aimed to remove the danger of war—an agreement on oil.

Oil is one of the most ticklish economic subjects in the world. Oil is what makes a nation's battleships move, runs the automobiles, sends the planes into the air—in fact, spells the difference between a nation of strength or a nation which must bow to the whims of others. The present oil agreement seeks to settle the battle for oil; eliminate one important cause of war.

The last war was scarcely over when Great Britain began maneuvering to corner the oil supplies of the world. British leaders were quite frank about it.

United States Protests.

Finding itself in this position, the United States government jumped into the battle for oil with vigor. The secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes, wrote a series of blunt, bare-faced notes to the British, wanting to know why they barred American oil companies from Palestine, since Palestine was not British but merely mandated to the British by the League.

Meanwhile, the British, though barring the U. S. from their areas of interest, quietly invaded ours. They turned up with concessions in Colombia, not far from the Panama Canal. Even in Panama proper, a British gold-mining company staked out a huge and suspicious claim in an area where no gold was known to exist.

History Begins to Repeat.

In World War II, history at first began to repeat. The five senators who toured the world war fronts came back with the story of how the U.S.A. was rapidly depleting her oil reserves while the British were hoarding theirs. They told how the British were trying to keep us from further developing oil resources in Arabia; how the British had a refinery on the Gulf of Persia, 50 per cent idle, while we shipped oil clear across the Atlantic to British armies in the Near East.

Yes, it looked as if history would repeat. On last April 29, however, representatives of the British and American governments negotiated an informal understanding aimed to eliminate the oil battles of the future. It was an excellent, far-sighted agreement. And during the last two weeks in Washington, Lord Beaverbrook and his associates have been negotiating with Secretaries Ickes and Hull to make this informal oil agreement formal and binding. This time, the British have been far more cooperative and far-sighted than in 1919—with one possible exception.

After U. S.-British experts laid their excellent April 29 ground work, Lord Beaverbrook kicked over the traces at some things, and he seems to be keeping a more watchful eye on the interests of the empire than on a fair future peace. For instance, he has been insisting that Britain have the right to ban the sale of U. S. oil in England, despite the fact that British Shell sells in this country. However, the basic agreement is truly encouraging when it comes to future peace.

Provisions of Agreement.

It provides, first: "That petroleum shall be available in international trade to the nationals of all peace-loving countries in adequate volume, at fair prices and on an equitable and non-discriminatory basis."

This means that, if the U.S.A. runs out of oil or vice versa, it is up to Britain to help supply us unless, for example, one or the other attempts to conquer Ethiopia as Mussolini did, and the world peace-machinery countries attempt to cut off their oil as the League tried to do to Italy but, because of pressure from the big companies, could not do.

The agreement also gives "equal opportunity" for "acquisition," "development," etc., in areas under concession. This eliminates cutthroat rivalry for new fields. Each nation is to respect the valid concessions of the other and its citizens.

Finally, and very important, "exploration, development, operation of refineries and distribution shall not be hampered by restrictions imposed by either government or its nationals."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

⚡ Cautious Mr. Turk—If you want the real low-down on why the Turks finally broke with Germany, it was because Hitler had moved troops out of Bulgaria just opposite Turkey. After that, the Turks weren't afraid of being attacked. . . . With Sweden and Switzerland both closed to Hitler for escape, his few remaining havens are Japan—which won't last long—and Argentina. . . . It has long been rumored that the Nazi top men were building up cash reserves in Argentina.

First American Ambulance Train in France

Transferring patients from ambulances to the first hospital trains to be operated in France by the American army. The train runs from Lison to Cherbourg and is made up of box cars left behind by the Germans. Insert shows closeup of wounded being loaded on train. Photo by telephoto. The box cars were completely overhauled to provide all equipment necessary to handle the wounded while they were being transferred to base hospital at Cherbourg. During the last war the U. S. army operated several base hospitals in France.

Three Generations and a Family

Not all of the refugees have left France. This grandmother, mother and children took to the woods as war rolled their way. They had been without food for days when found by American troops.

Among the thousands of refugees who landed at Hoboken, N. J., to spend the war's duration in a camp in the U. S. was the family of Jacob Dresdner, shown after coming ashore. The family is composed of Jacob and his wife and their nine children, from Hungary. With the rest of the lucky thousand permitted entry under the President's plan, they will be kept in Fort Ontario, near Oswego, N. Y., until the end of the war at which time they will be returned to their own countries. Insert shows how many of the refugees when forced to flee their homes tried to carry a few valuables with them.

Yanks Pass Through Periers

Yank column passes through the French town of Periers on their drive toward Paris and Berlin. The American tanks are shown as they pass through the ruins of this old French city, which was added to the list of captured towns. As was true in other French cities, the GIs were received with open arms by the citizens of Periers.

Sub Blasted by Depth Charges

Panicky Nazis pour out of the conning tower to the deck of a submarine blasted to the surface by depth charges planted by U. S. coast guard and navy destroyer escorts somewhere in the Atlantic. A few minutes later the crippled U-boat plunged to the bottom of the sea. Twelve Nazis were picked up and became prisoners of war.

The Anxious Seat

Seated on the radiator of a jeep, this German sniper in civilian clothes is being driven to American headquarters after his capture near St. Saver Lendelin. He looks a trifle worried—and well he might.

Young U-Boat Chief

A 26-year-old commander of a Nazi U-boat was captured after his ship was sunk by coast-guard-manned destroyer escort in the Atlantic. He was a former Californian.

ISRAEL'S FIRST KING

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 9:15-21; 10:25-27; 11:12-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king.
—I Peter 2:17.

"Well begun is half done," says the old proverb, reminding us of the importance of a good beginning. While it does not guarantee success (see next week's lesson), it is eminently desirable, and truly helpful. Israel had foolishly tired of being a God-ruled nation and had begun to demand a king.

Samuel was directed of God to the man of His choice, Saul, in a very remarkable way. He entered upon his service as king as an obedient and earnest ruler. (Would God that he had continued in that way!)

We note a number of favorable elements which indicated the possibility of a successful reign. He was—

I. Wanted by the People (9:15, 16).

A ruler forced upon a nation is sure of opposition, but here the people were clamoring for a king to rule over them. The way was wide open to the interest and the affection of their hearts. Saul was just the type to please them. Physically he was head and shoulders above the people—a desired thing in a ruler (see 10:23). He was mentally fitted (10:25)—humble (9:21), spiritually right (10:6-9), tolerant and kindly (11:13), and a good military leader (ch. 11).

II. Chosen by God (9:17).

All these qualities commended Saul to God as well as to the people. In fact, he was God's choice. A man could not enter upon high office with any more auspicious token for good.

Observe that what looked like a purely chance visit to Samuel, when Saul was on business for his father, was the occasion for the making known of God's choice. Out of a simple experience in daily life came an event which changed his entire destiny.

III. Anointed by the Prophet (9:18-20).

The man of God's choice had met God's man, Samuel, who proceeded to instruct him, and to privately anoint him as king. It was a tender scene. The aged prophet, rejected by the people as God's ruler over them, quietly and sweetly obeyed God's command to anoint the young man to be king.

Public recognition, which came later, was important, but, with Saul as with every servant of the Lord, the personal anointing of God, in the hidden place of communion with Him, was the matter of highest importance.

IV. Humble in Attitude (9:21).

That pride, which was ultimately to be Saul's downfall, was beautifully absent at the beginning of his reign. Although of good family, and well-equipped, he saw himself as poor and insignificant, not ready for such an honor.

That is the right attitude for one who is to serve God. Pride and self-assurance do not befit the man who stands in the presence of the Almighty.

V. Guided by Principle (10:25).

Saul did not enter upon his office, new as it was to both him and to Israel, without a Constitution, that is, without principles of action. Samuel, the Lord's prophet, wrote down "the manner of the kingdom" in a book. How interesting, and how important.

Rulers who imagine themselves so wise that they need no controlling laws, and so powerful that the law may not question their decisions, are certainly not rulers after God's plan. Knowing the heart of man, his weakness and pride, God has provided true principles by which the ruler is to be guided, yes and controlled.

VI. Forgiving in Spirit (10:26-27; 11:12, 13).

Some "worthless fellows" despised Saul and would not recognize him as king. The urge of the flesh was to destroy them, and especially did that seem proper because of their worthless nature. But Saul, in true kingly spirit, said that there was to be no revenge, just rejoicing.

To be of the right spirit toward one's enemies is the hall mark of Christian character.

VII. Established in Office (11:14, 15).

While there is the secret whisper of God in the heart, and the personal anointing by the Lord's servant, there should be the public recognition which establishes the Lord's servant in the eyes of all people. Saul had this at Gilgal. It placed him among the kings of the earth, and prepared the way for his dealing with other nations as well as with his own people.

Applying that truth to those who serve Christ, we say that there is upon the church the obligation to recognize God's call and anointing by giving that official recognition which sets the testimony and service of the individual free to exercise itself among men in general.

Lawn Chair Is Like
Mother's and Dad's

HERE is a pint-size lawn chair to delight the children and their young visitors. The seat is 10½ inches high, 13 inches deep and 15 inches wide—a good size for little ones now and roomy enough to be comfortable right up through their early teens.

A hammer and saw and screw-driver are all the tools you need to make this chair as well as the larger edition that you see in the sketch. All the pieces are straight cuts of standard widths, yet both of them have seats and backs at comfortable angles. The lines and proportions are good and the backs are removable for winter storage.

NOTE—Pattern 253 gives a complete list of materials, large diagrams for cutting all the pieces of the child's chair and step-by-step directions for assembling. Pattern 259 lists materials with diagrams and directions for the adult-size chair. Patterns are 15 cents each postpaid, or both patterns for 25 cents. Order from:

Salt Worth Its Weight

In Gold in Some Areas

A few cents buys a packet of salt in this country. Its very abundance here makes it difficult for us to realize its value to mankind. The fact is that salt is one of the most precious products in the world, and in desert areas it is literally worth its weight in gold. Intrinsically, it is even more valuable, for gold cannot buy health, but salt can maintain it.

The famous traveller, A. Tschiffely, who rode horseback from Buenos Aires to Washington, says that when journeying in desert regions, acting on the advice of natives, he always carried a bottle of lemon juice mixed with salt water to save him from fatigue.

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

Just a few lines well I have again got a change in address so thought I'd let you know so there will be no delay in receiving the paper. By the way I received my first copy since being here it was June 30th. Made me feel good to see it even if it was so old, as I haven't received mail for sometime. All our moral has been way down due to the mail situation. I am working at my old job I had at the old camp. Well isn't much to write.

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

Here I am at my new base. I sure have been around the country in the last couple of weeks. I was stationed in California for just ten days before I got sent up here. I might say that Calif. sure lives up to its name. We had a swell time while we were there.

I have been assigned to a crew. It is a very good life. We go to school side by side with the officers learn the same things and everything. I'd sure like to get the Orland Park Herald up here, if you will send it to me.

Yours,
Bill Maddox

About Soy Beans

The American Soybean Association will hold its Silver Jubilee meeting at the University of Illinois, Urbana September 12-13. Pres. J. E. Johnson, Champaign, has announced. Soybean growers, grain handlers, processors and others interested in soybeans from any angle are invited to attend.

Speaker will include Wheeler McMillen, editor of Farm Journal, Philadelphia, and Dr. O. E. May, Chief of the bureau of agricultural and industrial chemistry, USDA, Washington. McMillen's subject will be, The Next Twenty Five Years. May will speak on Soybean Research—A Look Into the Future. Sessions will open at 9 am. Tuesday, Sept. 12, and will close with Wednesday afternoon session.

The American Soybean Association was organized in 1920 at a soybean field day at Camden, Ind. Soybeans were then grown mainly as a minor forage crop in the Midwest states east of the Mississippi and the Southeast. It was only after the development of the soybean processing industry a decade later that the crop began to be raised for oil and meal. The acreage expanded greatly as a war crop after Pearl Harbor. Approximately 200 million bushels of soybeans were harvested in 1943.

See The World's Greatest Show

When the big Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, with its greater and more exciting performances comes to Chicago, Soldiers Field, to Tuesday August 22 to September 4 its patrons will not only thrill to the manifold marvels present in the big top but they will enjoy the absence of a traditional circus gremlin that has, until this year, been part of the circus musical program. The "umpah" in the band will not be there.

This annoying element of all former circus music has been emphatically removed by the new Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey, all-brass Wonder Band through revolutionary instrumentation by the show's musical director, Bert Knapp. Mr. Knapp, collaborating with Robert Ringling, who staged the 1944 edition of the circus, has created a new school of circus music which entirely deletes the boring "umpah, umpah".

To do this effectively was no easy task for Mr. Ringling and Mr. Knapp, who worked together on the problem for several years. It meant radical changes in the band itself before they came through with the greatest musical achievement in the history of the circus.

The new formula calls for an all brass band, first ever with The Greatest Show on Earth, and replaces the wood winds with a section of the rare Bayreuth tubas, thus bringing out richer beauty of tone, even with a band greater in size and scope than any ever heard under canvas.

Performances of the huge circus will be given at 2:15 and 8:15. To permit leisurely inspection of the mammoth new menagerie, the doors will open at 1 and 7.

Keep 'em Rolling

With the U. S. Forces in France. The Military Police corps of the United States Army on the Continent has a thousand jobs to do but they can all be summarized in the phrase "keep 'em rolling."

Through the whirling dust and clutched mud, in spite of shell fire booby traps, and strafing the MP's see to it that trucks and tanks with their troops and supplies rumble forward to their battle stations.

Sometimes they direct traffic from a mound of sand bags, or on top of a pile of rubble. They may even be called upon to help bring a baby into the world, or to direct madame to a dentist, but they do everything that keeps the towns happy and the traffic moving.

One MP unit had its first test of invasion when a Nazi plane dropped a bomb on the barrage balloon hovering over their Channel transport.

"The bomb burst right on top of the balloon and the fragments showered over the forward section of our Liberty ship, First Sgt. Henry Beauregard added. Luckily the men were at the stern and crouching low."

As their landing craft plowed toward the beach Sgt. Beauregard's outfit had another taste of combat when a nearby vessel struck a mine.

When they hit the shore and climbed a dune to bivouac they ran into a long line of Nazi prisoners of war and the order was almost given to open fire for MP's thought they had surprised an enemy encampment. They spent the night in hastily dug fox holes and the next morning started out to comb their allotted area for land mines and stragglers.

"The combing of the beach area was the hardest job his outfit has had to do because it was tough on the nerves, but they all did a good job and we didn't lose a single man their lieutenant stated.

Another problem faced by the MP's was guides, soldiers stationed at corners to direct the vehicles of their own outfits. Very often the units failed to use the road and the guides were left to wait. Some waited as long as three days, until picked up by the MP's and transported back to their units.

The soldier and his supplies roll along unhindered because the MP's have planned the way, and because they kept it open.

Among the unit members are: Sgt. Ellsworth McGovney, 25, son of Mrs. O. Ellsworth McGovney Mokena, Ill., who is attached to an Army Military Police Headquarters and Sgt. Henry V. Riding, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Riding, 169 S. Chicago St., Joliet.

He is an M P personnel sergeant. The company established a motor patrol along a coastal highway to pick up sailors, who survived the loss of their vessels, and return them to an emergency naval station.

The third day the company had its first hot meal, "C" rations, and the 4th morning they were served delicious hot cakes.

As the days passed the MP's job broadened. There were refugees to be turned over to the Civil Affairs officers. There were recruits for the Free French searching for the places to sign up with the Cross of Lorraine. And there was the little old lady with a toothache who wanted a dentist in a hurry.

Along the rads of war came the stragglers, the slightly wounded, the dazed, the shocked, the bewildered, the lost men of many outfits. They were all asking questions and the MP had to have the answers. He was a sort of signpost to victory. But the MP has his laughs. There was the French crowd that celebrated Bastille Day, by shaving (Continued on next page)

Keep 'em Rolling (Continued from previous page) the heads of three women who were known Nazi collaborators.

And then there was the sad day when a booby trap in a ruined home took the lives of four children and mutilated another.

Capt. Siros's outfit landed on a sandbar off the invasion shore and several of them would have been dragged to their deaths but for the courage of their comrades in khaki.

Sgt. Joseph Pile, 22 of Flushing, N. Y. saved three men who were unable to swim because of their packs. They were Staff Sgt. Harry B. Ash, Cpl. Cornelius G. Relyea and Pfc. Michael J. Shedlock.

od exploded coupbgo fe vrkxabRT D 1st Lieut. Herbert P. Vallow' Springfield, Long Island, New York seized his hunting knife and cut the straps on a pack worn by 1st Sgt. Arthur Burrell, Hudson Falls, New York enabling him to swim to safety.

When the outfit hit the beach it was formed and marched into a bivouac area. It was raining, but fox holes had to be dug and guards posted. Some of the men on guard said that first night was the toughest. It wasn't that anything happened, it was just waiting for it.

The boys told how the third day they feasted on cherry pie. "We like to think," said Capt. Siros, "that was the first cherry pie eaten by any unit in the invading forces. There is no doubt but that it was the best pie."

The second day Capt. Siros and Lt. Vallow lost their bed rolls and packs when the jeep with their luggage plunged into the sea as it was being unloaded.

According to plan the company moved into a town near the coast. They faced a double problem of town and traffic control. The traffic they could handle because they knew traffic, but they didn't know the town because they didn't know the people. The natives were skeptical of the bronze, curt Americans. But once the system started to work the situation cleared. The traffic job changed constantly because the roads were never the same.

"The roads were shelled. Land mines blasted them. Trucks lost wheels, had flat tires, lopped into ditches. As the tactical situation cleared, traffic flowed intermittently and then flooded out. Units were constantly moving and it was a tough job to direct convoys along the right road when you didn't know their correct destinations. But it had to be done and it was done said Capt. Siros.

He gave special credit in the traffic detail to Pfc. Fred G. Dress 20 of New York. Pfc. Dress, stationed at a traffic post near an ammunition dump, remained at his station directing traffic when fire broke out in the dump. The flames set off shells, mortars, and other explosives but Dress stuck to his corner until ordered to leave. Later a wall directly behind the spot where he was stationed was found to be pockmarked by shells.

LOWLY MILK WEED ALSO GOES TO WAR NOW DAYS

For many years the United States has used kapok, a silky, seed-pod fiber for filler in life jackets. Although the tree which produces kapok grows in many places in the tropics, only in Java were there any plantations where large quantities could be obtained. When Japan captured the East Indies, our supply was suddenly cut off, and we have been using up what kapok we had in the United States and what was in ships on the way.

Other things will do in some articles for which kapok was formerly used, but milkweed floss is the best material sufficiently waterproof and buoyant to use in life vests. This is why large quantities of it are so urgently needed. The floss in two bags of milkweed pods fills a life jacket. Your collection, we must have all the milkweed we can get, because our armed services will continue to need life jackets as never before. Remember there will be no more kapok for our fighting men until after they and their allies have wrested Java from the Japanese.

The Junior Red Cross of Will County is sponsoring the gathering of the milk weed pods.

Old Joe said to Young Joe...

"... when you get over there in the thick of it, son, you won't have time to think about the fancy ideals you're supposed to be fighting for. You'll be interested mostly in shooting straight, and shooting first."

"But some night when you're lying out under the stars, you'll probably figure the whole thing out—and it will be very simple."

"You'll realize that you're fighting to protect the kind of decency and freedom you were raised in—and will want to raise your kids in, too."

"You'll be fighting to protect the opportunity that all Americans have of starting at the bottom and getting to the top—and that's typically American."

"You're fighting to protect your right to live your own life in your own way without being pushed around by some bright young bureaucrat who wants to do all your planning for you."

"That's about all there is to it, son. But it's mighty worth while—this business of keeping our freedom—of sticking to the things that have made America great."

"I've often thought that our own family was a pretty good example of what can happen in this country—and nowhere else. I started as a chore boy on this very farm, when I was ten years old. Made up my mind I'd own it some day. Nothing in the world to stop me—if I really wanted it."

"We didn't have good roads in those days. No cars or trucks or tractors. No radios. No airplanes. No telephones, movies, or electric lights."

"I didn't have much education—didn't have the time or money to get it. But I made up my mind that my own children would have some of the things I didn't have."

"You've had a good education. You went to agricultural college. You've traveled around the country in your car. You've seen how the other fellow lives and runs his farm. You keep up to date through your radio, your reading—and your various farm associations."

"And, son, it's hard to believe that most of the inventions, advantages and improvements that have made you more efficient and more comfortable, have happened in my lifetime."

"But that's the very thing I'm talking about. That's the power of America. We've got push in this country—and ingenuity—the determination to keep on getting stronger and better all the time. And all of us have got to see that nothing stops that kind of progress—neither enemies from the outside, nor from the inside."

"You're a chip off the old block, son. You think about the way I do. You work hard—very hard. But you've had more advantages than I had. And you're a better man in every way. You'll go farther."

"You're the new type of American farmer. You're running a business when you farm today. It's a mighty important business too—and you've got to know your stuff."

"Just remember this, my boy—you're a free agent. Your future is under your hat. You have seen what our American way of doing things has meant to you and me and millions of others, in opportunity, progress and happiness. That's what you're really fighting for, son. You put the heat on, over there—and I'll put it on over here."

VETERANS TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEE FORMED

An organization known as The Tuberculous Veterans Committee has been formed among medical authorities, executives of veterans' associations, agencies dealing with tuberculosis and other organizations, in an attempt to aid in solving the problem of the returning war veteran who has tuberculosis, it has been announced.

"Recognizing that the problem of tuberculosis among war veterans is closely interlocked with the health of the general public, the committee will attempt to educate both the veteran and his family to the dangers of the disease," said Mr. Balford Q. Shields, commander of the

James C. Russell Blackhawk Post No. 107 of the American Legion, Chicago, chairman.

One of the chief difficulties involving treatment of tuberculous war veterans is that service men are so anxious to get home to their families that they often refuse to stay in a hospital until their cases are arrested, he pointed out. "Many of these not only become steadily worse after they are at home but they also infect their families and friends with the disease. Consequently, the committee will stress the importance of effecting a complete arresting of each case before the war veteran returns to private life.

A meeting of the full committee has been called August 25 at 3:30 pm. at the Tuberculosis Institute, 343 S. Dearborn, Chicago.

MUCH to the surprise and shock of several American league managers, plus their supporters, the long time lowly Browns have refused to crack.

They have kept coyly away from the soapy chute under the smart direction of my old Titus, Ala., friend, James Luther Sewell. Luke's main instructions have been to "keep them rolling."

And the Browns have kept rolling for about the second time in over forty years, dating back to the days of George Sisler.

No one will stand up and say that the Browns have any shining set of stars. They haven't. But they have a set of steady going ballplayers, including Vernon Stephens, George McQuinn, Chester Laabs, and Al Zarilla, plus at least a good mid-war pitching staff.

They claim no outstanding stars, but their average certainly matches anything else in the American league. In Luke Sewell they have a smart and well-balanced manager who has earned their liking and their respect.

Luke ought to know his share of baseball. He began catching for Cleveland back in 1921, a matter of 23 years ago. Luke stuck with Cleveland for 12 years before he moved on to Washington—and later to Chicago. He was only a .259 hitter, but he always knew how to handle that big glove, and direct his pitching staff.

When he drew the job of managing the Browns it was something like being sentenced to Siberia. What difference did it make—who might be managing the Browns?

I talked with Luke early this spring and his only comment was:

"We have just as good a chance as any team in the league. Just at this spot there are at least five teams that are evenly matched. It's the sort of race where it might be important to get the jump. That's what we are shooting for. The team that gets the jump will have a big advantage with so many other clubs killing off any single challenger."

How It Worked Out

It has worked out just as Sewell predicted. The Browns got the jump. Just back of them were the Red Sox, Yankees, Indians, etc. There was little difference.

Luke Sewell had called the turn as far back as April showers. "Get the jump."

The Yankees and Red Sox, Indians, Tigers and White Sox, all began clawing each other or one another. Once in a while some Brown challenger would win four or five in a row, then drop the next four.

The Red Sox and the Yankees both kept making threatening moves. Then the Indians cut in. But when the dust had settled on various fields and the smoke had blown away, there were the Browns still out in front, piking along and still winning their share and protecting that early jump that Luke Sewell worked for.

It is a much tougher proposition for a leading club to have only one fast-moving pursuer on his heels. When you have three or four they keep taking care of the chasers and dragging them back.

The charge has been made that St. Louis hasn't supported either club—Cardinals or Browns—that St. Louis is not a two club major entry. This is all true.

St. Louis, for one reason or another, is only a one club entry in the major leagues, and not any too hot as a one-club spot. There are any number of cities, including Los Angeles, that would be a big league gold mine in comparison.

But this has nothing to do with the ballplayers composing the double line-ups of Cardinals and Browns. But the facts are that the ballplayers working for St. Louis fans have dominated both leagues so far.

The Cardinals were a romp before the first ball was thrown back in April. The Cardinals would be an even bet against a team picked from the other 15 clubs in both leagues. But one might have thought that the uprising of the Browns would have churned up the old town in Missouri. In place of that the Dodgers in last place in the National league have been outdrawing the leading Browns.

This has soured the baseball crowd in general, taken from the map at large, against the Browns. It has been my belief that the two best baseball cities in the country are Brooklyn and Detroit, when you consider their population.

The main point in early August is that the Browns were supposed to crack some time back—and they haven't cracked yet.

And these Brown ballplayers can still use the coming world series money as well as any other club, even if their home town isn't any too keen about baseball.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Two of the nation's most widely heralded civilian heavyweights were on display at Wrigley field in Chicago a couple of weeks ago and proved one thing—there is no need for Sgt. Joe Louis, current custodian of the world's championship, to go into serious training for the defense of his title.

The Chicago debacle saw Joe Baksi, a big, tough hulk, maul his way to a 10-round decision over Lee Savold, Paterson, N. J., heavyweight. The victory carried with it recognition of the Illinois Athletic commission as "duration" heavyweight champion. That means until Louis, Conn. Pastor and the rest return.

We had figured Savold to win. Not that we were particularly interested, but after all it was a fight supposedly of some consequence in the current heavyweight picture. Incidentally, that picture is dark, forbidding and not very interesting to see.

Fighting Machine

It wasn't so long ago that Savold, the loser, looked like a fine fighting machine. But the machine appears to be quite well worn out. He had two good rounds against Baksi the fourth and fifth—but he wasn't the same fighter who scored previous successes in Chicago against Nate Bolden, Lem Franklin (twice) and Lou Nova.

Baksi is no graceful gazelle. He plods ahead with his pointed jaw stuck out belligerently and his huge hands flopping. But that jaw is fashioned of granite and is impervious to blows that would wilt a man of lesser stamina.

Savold was in bad shape much of the time, having been mauled in close about the head and kidneys. Baksi slammed lefts to the body and whisked short, right uppercuts across the chin. From the sixth round on the big Pole kept pressing his advantage, until, at the finish, Lee's nose was bleeding and the left side of his body was the color of a boiled lobster.

Even Hymie Wiseman, Savold's manager, couldn't think of a thing to say in defense of his boy. "He looked like a preliminary boy. There can be no excuse except that he didn't—or couldn't—untrack himself. I swear that on his gym showing he looked unbeatable. He never was better."

Great Hearted

He had one thing that reminded onlookers of the Savold of yesterday. He had the same heart that he did when he disposed of Bolden, Franklin and Nova. When the last gong sounded there were many who insisted that he had gone over the crest, and that from now on his fights would continue to grow less effective. Perhaps the pace Lee has always maintained finally caught up with him, depriving his legs of speed and his fists of punch.

Savold made no excuses. "I was in shape," he said in his dressing room, "but the maritime service took some zip out of me. I can't concentrate too much on my ring wars, especially when I'm training for a bigger battle."

The fight wasn't a howling financial success, luring a $43,355 gross gate, which probably means the show was promoted at a deficit since the headliners took 60 per cent of the net. It also proved a bit boring to the assembled 16,135 spectators, 7,500 of them being uniformed servicemen and women, who were Promoter Jack Kearns' guests.

To be truthful, the customers, probably including Kearns' nonpaying guests, began to boo the action about the time of the seventh round and didn't stop until the bout reached its somewhat inglorious end.

Louis and Conn

Perhaps we're too critical, but there are only two contemporary heavyweights we'd travel any distance to see—Champion Joe Louis and Contender Billy Conn.

Both men are real fighters. Both have the heart for it, the ability to fight and are capable of putting up a real show every time they step into the ring.

In our book, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis are the two greatest heavyweights of all time. Both men were dangerous from the start.

'Sigh' Chology

By RUTH MAGUIRE
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"THERE must be a kink in my personality somewhere," Judy decided.

"You must be more aggressive," Pat Lanning advised. "Stare people in the eye like a—"

"Lion tamer?" Judy interposed. "Sure, same principle. Now you take this fellow, Glenn Dale, who wrote that book 'Personality Plus'; he's a guy who knows his way about. He says, 'The world reflects your estimation of yourself and treats you accordingly.' In other words, if you act like a mouse you'll be treated like one."

"And what is the fate of a mouse," moaned Judy, "but to be caught in a trap?" Then there she determined not to be snared by her own personality, not if she had to develop the stare of Cantor and the shoulders of Tommy Harmon. And she would buy a copy of Glenn Dale's masterpiece to boot!

Whenever there was a crowd waiting for a bus, an elevator or a streetcar Judy was always the last to get on—even though she was the first to arrive on the spot. Sometimes the bus or elevator door would be shut right in her face. Often she railed at fate for making her a first-shall-be-last instead of a last-shall-be-first type like Pat Lanning. Pat was a diminutive, barely five-foot-four genius of mental giant who was going to conquer the world. Crowds melted like snow when he waded through subway traffic or tried to get off a crowded trolley.

Today, Judy resolved, gripping her pocketbook, her commuter's pass and Glenn Dale's best seller tightly in her left arm and giving the only other occupant of the station platform her special interpretation of a lion tamer's stare, I will be first! She stood tense and ready for action.

"Good book?" he asked.

The train hove in sight and stopped with an asthmatic puff opposite Judy as she stood, waiting to spring into action. Then, for no apparent reason, the locomotive shuddered convulsively, sighed and hiccupped itself several yards down the platform.

He seemed to have a forgiving disposition for he stood patiently, hat in hand, while Judy, with another glare entirely out of proportion to the courtesy extended her, stalked away menacingly and entered or appeared to enter the train. She was in that state that most women will recognize instantly and sympathetically. With one foot on the step she had attempted to propel herself into the yawning doorway by a gigantic push with the toe of her left shoe. But that toe had unknowingly jammed itself into a wad of gum parked there, no doubt, by some unpatriotic chewer who had hoarded an unladylike or ungentelemanly mouthful. Her shoe was sucked off, Judy was left dangling by hand-power alone, her packages and equilibrium equally upset. For her stockinged foot had somehow found its balance in the overcoat pocket of the would-be passenger behind her.

Several minutes later a bewildered Judy realized that she had been hurled into the car, her scattered belongings returned to her and that her shaking hand was clinging to a strap. Her erstwhile rescuer hung on to the strap beside her. "Good book?" he asked.

"I'm going to donate it to the first ash can I see."

"I didn't care for it either. Good enough psychology but never worked for me. Just let me try to be a bombshell with my personality and blooze—I am trampled on."

"You've read the book, then?" "Yes, and until now," he looked into her eyes until Judy blushed. "I've felt that it was a waste of time."

Judy sighed and relaxed, recognizing in her companion a kindred spirit. He was another first-shall-be-last! Chameleonlike, Judy's personality returned to its own sweet sunniness and her companion basked in the warmth of her ready smile. One can hardly stand on ceremony with a man who has had one's foot in his pocket. "Perhaps," he suggested some twenty stations later, "we might salvage some good from the purchase price of that volume if we discussed it at dinner?"

"I'd love it," Judy beamed, "Mr. —"

"Dale," he replied, "Glenn Dale, forever at your service?"

SURE FIRE HITS

Two ham vaudeville actors were trying to get an engagement from a booking agent. The agent looked over his lists. Finally he found a spot, and stopped.

"How long is your act?" he asked. The two players looked at each other a minute. They were not sure of this detail, but finally one said: "Twenty-five minutes."

"Twenty-five minutes is too long for us. We have a long bill, and couldn't let you have that much time. Suppose you cut your turn down to eight minutes."

"Eight minutes!" screamed one of the hams. "We couldn't do anything in eight minutes! Why, we spend seven minutes of our act just taking bows!"

Something Fishy

Nit—Did you hear about the fish that has measles?

Wit—No! How is he doing?

Nit—Well, he just has them on a small scale!

Now what are we going to do about it?

Matilda—I don't know, ma'am, unless you raise my wages.

RUBBER

Using a combination of natural and synthetic rubber in the post-war period may result in automobile tires that will establish new high marks for longevity, according to a B. F. Goodrich chemical technician. He cites the big mileage returned from Goodrich synthetic tires, made in 1940 and composed of both types of rubber, as the basis for his predictions about post-war tires.

Counsel Had Gone to Great Length to Make It Clear

The scene was in a courtroom. Counsel looked sternly at the man in the witness stand and demanded:

"Did you, or did you not, on the date in question, or at any time previously or subsequently, say, or even intimate to the defendant or anyone else, whether friend or mere acquaintance, or, in fact, a stranger, that the statement imputed to you, whether just or unjust, and denied by the plaintiff, was a matter of no moment or otherwise? Answer me! Did you or did you not?"

The man in the dock clutched at his throat.

"Did I, or did I not, what?" he gasped.

When Your Back Hurts--

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.
